

Dr. Ralph Hughes is an inspirational speaker, leadership trainer, educator, and author, originally from the Harlem section of Manhattan in New York City. Dr. Hughes is the former owner of a leadership consulting company, which he ran for over ten years. Dr. Hughes is also a retired senior federal law enforcement officer and the former lead faculty area chair for the University of Phoenix's College of Criminal Justice and the College of Humanities, respectively, where he taught higher education classes for over fifteen years.

Through Dr. Hughes's background and experience as a leadership consultant, educator, and law enforcement officer, he has trained thousands of people and given hundreds of lectures, presentations, seminars, and workshops on leadership, organizational behavior, entrepreneurship, public speaking, and criminal justice.

Dr. Hughes's research interests include intrinsic motivation, organizational behavior, emotional intelligence, servant leadership, transformational leadership, and African American studies. He holds a doctorate in strategic leadership from Regent University, a master's degree in organizational leadership from Mercy University, and a bachelor's degree in management from Nyack College.

Dr. Hughes spends his time speaking, training, writing self-help books and movie screenplays, and spending time with his wife and children.